Fantasy from stele

Jakub Polaczyk

Fantasy from stele is my third piece which refers to the topic of ancient culture, after my compositions Ancient Book (2006) and Combinations on Olympus (2007). In Fantasy from stele I am concerned about depicting the ancient Sumerian culture, which appeared long time ago in the land of Mesopotamia, in a territory located around todays Iraq. The main traits of that civilization are still not well known to us. We have known about the existence Sumer from archeological findings: relieves, stelae or instruments. Fantasy from stele is some sort of dialogue between my imagination and the myth of the Sumerian culture with their words, scales, and instruments, which grow into a complex musical structure. This composition is divided into four dialogues between the ancient time and today. I would like to dedicate this piece to the people who died in the Iraq War.

Scintillation II

Anthony Green

My recent compositions have focused on relinquishing one element of music to heighten another. I have developed a new notation to communicate my idea of relinquishing rhythmic control as a composer, leaving me to focus solely on pitch, color, timbre, structure, and form. This notation is called “free-ostinato notation”, where the interpreter executes a musical cell (which can contain from 1 note to an endless amount of notes) in a free rhythm of his or her choosing. The cell is repeated freely, maintaining the order of the pitches, until the music yields movement to the next cell or musical idea. I have composed 3 works that feature this idea abundantly, and 1 work that uses this idea completely throughout.

After a brief exploration of the possibilities of “free-ostinato notation” (an exploration that will continue throughout my life), I used this same principle in a work for flute and marimba called Scintillation, but varied its execution. My Scintillation series are works for two instruments, where one instrument has a controlled ostinato roll below a soloistic gesture performed by the remaining instrument. The roles may or may not interchange throughout the work, and the ostinato may or may not be always present. Scintillation II, for viola and cello, relinquishes complete rhythmic control for the soloistic gestures, which occur for both instruments. The ostinati in the work is sometimes specific, and sometimes incorporates “free-ostinato” notation. Ultimately, this work is an exploration in string colors, and a study in transition in an environment that lacks a hyper-control over rhythm.

My sincere gratitude is extended toward the performers of GISXX of Florian Vlashi, and to this years IC[CM].

Cadenza

Haig Zacharian

The word “cadenza” names that part in a concerto for a soloist and orchestra when the orchestra stops playing leaving the soloist play on his own to emotionally and technically exposing himself while giving the best of his art and technique, which is thus contrasted with that of the other performers in the orchestra.

My composition Cadenza although conceived as a solo piece, and not as an orchestral work, combines both the features of the original cadenza-form, and the traits of a solo virtuoso work, in which the musical material and the instrumental demands on the performer are unique.

I didn't even think before about writing any series of instrumental solos. My solo compositions “Solo for viola (1998), or “Cadenza”, for solo violin (2000) and later “Solo flute piece” came about commissioned by ISCM Albanian Section. When I recently reviewed Cadenza in 2009, I was able to discover new solo techniques for the violin, for which I have to thank the important suggestions of the virtuoso violinist Florian Vlashi. Writing for solo instruments, however, is as much a delicate matter as it is satisfactory.

I believe that what should be felt and maybe understood, in fact, the sole aspect that gives unity to the whole work, is the image of the performer's figure just starting at the moment when he picks the violin up both, violin and performer become one being creating the magic instant of a performance. I believe that a work conceived in such way combined with the use of contemporary violin techniques would encourage any violinist to contribute with his or her own thoughts while playing the same texture.

All the structures in Cadenza are developed from the basic pattern we can hear at the beginning of the piece, which is based on G D A E (the four open strings of the violin), which is combined with F \geq , C \geq , G \geq , D \geq and A $^-$, E $^-$, B $^-$, F.

Cadenza does not use any of the traditional musical forms to structure the piece. It is divided in two main blocks (at Molto sostenuto....). The subdivisions usually match with changes in the violin technique and can thus be easily distinguished.

The work however begins in calmness with pizzicatos on string G and proceeds with a relative growing emotional curve followed by the fall and return to the beginning calm on the G, playing normal, “pp” without vibrato. I think, this conventional trait isn't unnecessary, on the contrary helps conceiving the work as included in a “frame”.

The Thinking Machine

Òscar Colomina i Bosch

The present work was conceived and written as a concert piece with multiple possible readings ($8! = 8 \times 7 \times 6 \times 5 \times 4 \times 3 \times 2 \times 1 = 40,320$). Heavily influenced by the writings of J.L. Borges and by Ramón Llull's artefact The Thinking Machine (13th century) this piece could/should be played in any ordering apart from the printed one, thus breaking the syntactical ordering of the musical discourse and generating a different meaning for each possible reading.

The Thinking Machine is, thus, a syntactic exercise in meta-linear narrative that tries to push Henri Dutilleux's structural findings and conception of time one step further into Post-Modernity by combining the Medieval thinkers' love for combinatory and mechanic artefacts and the contemporary digital culture of Mp3 readers, PC music libraries and shuffle modes; all as a way of breaking away from the Modern linear conception of time and moving towards a digital, fluid one.

Those different readings of the work are so not because the musical syntagms themselves, the sextet's movements, are changed in any way, but because the different ordering of those same musical syntagms creates a new meaning purely through the combinations of those same syntagms, very much as spoken and written language does.

Effectively, before defining the musical material I had generated a very sophisticated syntagmatic and semantic modular structure. The only thing left to do was to fill the structure with musical content –to compose the materials that were going to be developed, presented, modified, when and how that modular structure dictated, forcing me to take very unusual decisions in the process. One cannot but quote Italo Calvino when he writes 'And so the author vanishes – that spoiled child of ignorance – to give place to a more thoughtful person, a person who will know that the author is a machine, and will know how this machine works'.

Following on these considerations, I decided that 'The Thinking Machine' should be mono-thematic, having a unified thematic and harmonic material to tie all the complexities together. I also undertook to use pivot chords in the style of Dutilleux to anchor certain points in the narrative and draw the listeners directly back to precise emotional areas, while exploring discontinuities in the treatment of the material within the movements by using various transformations in what the semioticians call the syntagmatic (discursive) and the paradigmatic (semantic) axis: above/below, front/behind, close/distant, left/right, inside/outside, up/down, foreground/background and addition, deletion, substitution, transposition, metonymy (substituting whole through a connection) and synecdoche (substituting whole by part).

The use of memory in the structure is two-fold. Memory is built in by inter-movement quotations, variations and developments that when these movements are syntactically reordered change meaning : what was a premonition of a main event in one reading could become a memory of it in a different sequence; thus generating multiple narratives by the reordering of the same original group of musical syntagms.

Furthermore, I am interested in the exploration of cultural memory and cultural Topoi. Hence the choice of titles and forms for each of the movements of the sextet were done keeping this in mind and with a clear intention of binding the audiences through the shared into the more unusual, specially as I believe that the compositional exploration of certain Borgesian techniques (creation as translation, memory, cultural Topoi), which emphasise the shared as much as the individual, could be a very powerful tool of communication with audiences and could definitely help re-build the divide between Contemporary Composition and Society, and indeed reinforce the continuity of Europe as a Social, Artistic, and Historical Collective.

And All My Senses Suspended

Juraj Kojs

And All My Senses Suspended for flute, violin, cello and piano belongs to a series of pieces inspired by poetry of St. John of Cross. The composition explores instrumental sonorities that lie on the border of hearing. All instruments predominantly produce colored noise. The concealed pitch becomes heard as the color of timbre.

Chimera

Yuko Ohara

In Greek mythology, a Chimera was a grotesque beast, a fire-breathing female monster with a lion's head, a goat's body and a serpent's tail. The word was later adopted by biologists who used Chimera to signify an organism containing a mixture of genetically different tissues, formed by processes including fusion of early embryos.

Chimera consists of two main sections, based on the pitches A (bars 1-69) and on E (bars 95-141) plus a third, shorter rhythmic section (bars 70-94) in between. Firstly, harmony and the progression of notes were considered. Then came the idea of having the pitch A as a reference point, often meeting and fusing with notes from the other sections and, at those points, forming a musical chimera, or fusion of notes. That was the genesis of the piece.

I used two strings as the basis for the violin part. From the second bar of the piece, I included two types of articulating A on the D-string, both long and pizzicato. The A-notes are written in quintuplet for the opening bars of the violin part, the distinct timbres like twins, genetically different but obviously a pair. This is one of the themes of the piece.

The piano part is derived from the violin part. It too sounds on A and follows the same patterns with the same notes and a quintuplet structure, but pitched four octaves lower. The sound is of the plucking of the A-string inside the piano. Subsequently, the violin part in D-string has microtone deviation as it maintains an A-note together with the open A-string. The violin part becomes increasingly technical while the piano part introduces a major second around the pitch A in an echo of the moments preceding the division of a cell.

There then follows a more rhythmic section, created from different values of tuplet for each instrument, quintuplets for the piano and septuplets for the violin. They tend to feel like they are going against the metre and the tuplet values increase more and more during twelve bars. They are antimetric figures, going against the rhythm, and the sound leaves a 'gap' for our ears. The irrational rhythms increase in value becoming difficult to count until the piano solo begins using only semidemiquavers. The piano solo suddenly has very soft dynamics.

The last section begins on E in both the violin and piano parts. The piano plays whole tone scales whilst the violin plays with other microtonal scales. It is similar to the first section, but is more complex. The violin part incorporates double-stops going from major second to major seventh. It is much freer than in the first section and many glissandi appear in major sevenths and are protracted. In this section, the progression of notes adopted in the first section is completely obliterated. This section is constructed from the semidemiquaver material for the piano from the previous rhythmical section.

Thereafter, the piano part insistently plays C-sharp, B, E flat, and A notes, which spell out the word ‘Chimera’. Finally the C-sharp falls to C-natural in the violin part to indicate the end.

The piece was written in 2005 and premiered by violinist Eiichi Chijiwa and pianist Junko Yamamoto at the Takefu Composition Prize 2006 at the Takefu International Music Festival (music director, Toshio Hosokawa) in Japan.

Sete cancións populares galegas

Juan Durán

Hace casi treinta años que escribí para mi hermana Carmen mis primeras canciones sobre textos de Fernando Pessoa que ella, en 1985, estrenaría en la Stathalle de Heidelberg (Alemania) con gran éxito. Desde entonces, ella ha dado a conocer mucha música mía. Sin embargo, yo no había vuelto a dedicarle específicamente una obra a ella. Este ciclo de canciones que ahora se presenta también va dedicado a Carmen Durán, pues es ella siempre la voz que canta en mi conciencia la música que luego yo escribo en el papel.

Esta vez el estímulo para escribir una nueva pieza vocal vino de la mano de Helena Palma, quien me invitó a presentar una obra original en este congreso. Se trataba de contribuir a un encuentro en el que se iba a tratar sobre música y lenguaje. Me pareció útil trabajar sobre piezas populares que estuvieran contrastadas en los más importantes cancioneros gallegos y sobre ellas, mejor dicho, a partir de ellas, construir un entramado sonoro con la base de un grupo de cuerda. El resultado se verá, pero la propuesta no es nueva y el soberbio ciclo de Falla parece gravitar sobre esta propuesta mía. Es necesario que se diga aquí cuáles son los cancioneros consultados: El de Martínez Torner para el nº 2 Cantinela, el nº 3 Muiñeira y el nº 7 Pandeirada; el de Casto Sampedro para el nº 4 Alalá y el de Dorothe Schubarth para el nº 5 Foliada y el nº 6 Berce. Sólo el nº 1, la Alborada con que se inicia el ciclo no corresponde a un cancionero determinado, simplemente está en la esencia de todo “arranque” de Alborada que impregna gran parte del acervo musical gallego.

Como siempre, el autor busca el contraste y la variedad; hay, pues, en este ciclo tanta diversidad de ritmos como de emociones dentro de un conjunto propio, muy personal, que está en línea con mis últimas obras para cuerdas, tal es el caso del Divertimento, que en estos días previos a este congreso ha repuesto la OSG.

Juan Durán

Juan Durán nace en Vigo (Pontevedra) en 1960. Cursó estudios en los conservatorios superiores de A Coruña y Vigo, donde se tituló como profesor superior. De entre sus maestros destaca la presencia de Rogelio Groba en las materias de Contrapunto, Análisis, etc. Asistió a cursos de formación con distintos ponentes, congresos, etc. Desarrolló una cierta actividad como instrumentista de piano, en el campo del acompañamiento y la música de cámara. En esta etapa destaca su colaboración, entre los años 1983 y 1988, con el violoncellista Lito Iglesias (actualmente profesor del Conservatorio de Música de Barcelona), con el que realizó numerosos conciertos.

Fue profesor numerario del Conservatorio Superior de Música de A Coruña de 1987 a 1997, institución en la que también ejerció los cargos de Jefe de Estudios y Director.

En 1987 funda, junto a compositores como Paulino Pereiro, Xavier de Paz o Juan Vara, la “Asociación Galega de Compositores”, al objeto de contribuir a la divulgación de la música sinfónica gallega. El compromiso con la música gallega ha sido un aspecto crucial omnipresente en la trayectoria del compositor Juan Durán, el cual se ha manifestado fundamentalmente en la constante denuncia por la falta de normalización que ésta acusa en la sociedad en la que vive. Su nombramiento como Presidente de la Asociación Galega de Compositores en el año 2000 viene a potenciar esa actitud, intentando contribuir durante su mandato a la mejora por el reconocimiento institucional de la música gallega y su mejor difusión. En esa línea, son de destacar sus trabajos de recuperación del patrimonio histórico, como orquestaciones de obras de Juan Montes (a petición del prestigioso musicólogo José López Calo), Juan José Castro “Chané” (sus canciones sobre textos de Curros Enríquez son frecuentemente interpretadas, siendo la más reciente este año en el “Festival Internacional del Libro”, organizado por el Ministerio de Cultura en Cuba) o Marcial del Adalid, de quien reconstruyó, junto a su especialista más destacada Margarita Viso, su ópera Inés e Bianca, por encargo del Instituto Galego de las Artes Escénicas y Musicales (Consellería de Cultura y Comunicación Social de la Xunta de Galicia).

En su producción compositiva destaca la presencia de la música de cámara y el lied. En relación a la música camerística está orientada a todo tipo de combinatorias instrumentales: dúos para distintos instrumentos con piano, tríos, cuartetos, quintetos, etc.

Por lo que se refiere al lied, su obra presenta una gran variedad de poetas y estilos, con canciones en castellano, gallego, portugués, italiano y francés. Asimismo, ha dedicado una especial atención tanto a la transcripción de piezas de distinta autoría (particularmente para Quinteto de Metales) como a la forma de Variación, habiendo escrito obras sobre temas de Pablo Sorozábal, Andrés Gaos, etc.

Atiende también la producción de carácter didáctico, con distintos trabajos orientados tanto a la materia de Lenguaje Musical como a obras instrumentales. Entre estas últimas cabe destacar: Álbum de Orquesta, El Jardín de Margarita, Juguetes, O Señor Biscuit, etc.

Recibió encargos de la Consellería de Cultura de la Xunta de Galicia (Longa noite de pedra), Ayuntamiento de Ferrol (Juegos tímbricos), Orquesta Sinfónica de Galicia (Cantiga Finisterrae para múltiples voces de luz), Real Filharmonía de Galicia (Divertimento), Festival Mozart (felizcumpleanosmozart.com) o el Festival Via Stellae (Cuarteto de cuerda).

En 2001, su Cantiga Finisterrae para múltiples voces de luz, cantata para soprano, barítono, coro y orquesta, significa un punto de inflexión en su trayectoria profesional por el éxito alcanzado de público y crítica. Prueba de ello es la reposición en 2008 de la misma como cierre de temporada junto a la IX Sinfonía de Beethoven, con la Orquesta Sinfónica de Galicia, los coros de ésta y el del Palau de la Música Catalana, la soprano Lola Casariego, el barítono José Antonio López y la dirección nuevamente de Víctor Pablo.

En 2008 tiene lugar en el Festival de Ópera de A Coruña, el estreno de su ópera O arame, sobre texto de Manuel Lourenzo, bajo la dirección musical de Maximino Zumalave.

Juan Durán ha ganado numerosos premios, entre los que se encuentran el “Premio de Composición” otorgado por la Universidad Carlos III de Madrid para su obra Álbum para Orquesta (2000), el primer premio del concurso de composición organizado por la “Federación Galega de Bandas Populares” con su obra sinfónica O soño de Breogán en 2008, “Premio de la Crítica” de 2009 por su trayectoria musical culminada con el estreno de su ópera O arame.

Su obra de cámara y vocal es regularmente interpretada, especialmente en los auditorios gallegos, lo que no excluye importantes eventos en salas como la Fundación Juan March, el Instituto Cervantes de Nueva York, el Ciclo de Música de Cámara y Polifonía de la Orquesta de Radiotelevisión Española, la Fundación Calouste Gulbenkian, el Auditorio Nacional de Madrid, el Palau de la Música Valenciana, etc.

Algunos de los solistas que interpretan su música son Antonio Arias, Albert Nieto, Alejandro Zabala, Laura Alonso, Joaquín Pixán, Diego Fernández Magdaleno, Emmanuel Ferrer, Carlos Casado, etc. y directores tales como Víctor Pablo, Juanjo Mena, Antoni Ros Marbá, Edmon Colomer o Maximino Zumalave.

Mantiene una relación fluida con el “Grupo Instrumental Siglo XX” (integrado por primeros atriles de la Orquesta Sinfónica de Galicia), destinatario de la primera audición de algunas de sus más importantes obras camerísticas. Su director, el violinista albanés Florian Vlashi, se ha mostrado como un músico sensible hacia la defensa y divulgación del patrimonio musical gallego, siendo muy frecuentes sus colaboraciones con la Asociación Galega de Compositores.

La casi totalidad de su producción está editada en “VISO Editorial”, “Dinsic” “Real Musical”, “Arte Tripharia”, etc. Hay registros de su música en RNE, Radio galega y en varios Cds y DVDs.

Carmen Durán

Carmen Durán, nacida en Vigo, pertenece a una familia dedicada a la música, empezando por su padre, barítono de éxito en numerosas producciones de zarzuela, además de su hermano Juan Durán, compositor reconocido y premiado numerosas veces a lo largo de su carrera.

Empieza su formación como cantante a temprana edad, primero en A Coruña con doña Honoria Goicoa y después en la Escuela Superior de Canto de Madrid, en la que tiene como maestra a Lola Rodríguez de Aragón. Allí inicia su actividad operística debutando con el papel de Dorabella en el “Così fan tutte” de Mozart, junto a una intensa actividad concertística como solista del Coro Nacional.

Prosigue sus estudios en Milán, en el Centro di Perfezionamento per artisti lirici del Teatro alla Scala, en donde estudia con Giulietta Simionato y participa en numerosas producciones junto a personalidades importantes del mundo artístico como Abbado, Strehler, Kuhn, Taddei, Hoffmann, Cernov, Arena, etc.

En Treviso gana el primer premio del Concurso Internacional de Canto “Toti dal Monte” y continúa su actividad concertística y operística en Alemania, país en el que reside actualmente y en donde empieza como titular del teatro de ópera de Heidelberg, en la que se la contrata para interpretar el papel de Zerlina en el “Don Giovanni” de Mozart.

Participa asimismo en producciones operísticas como intérprete de Strauss en distintos teatros alemanes e inicia una importante actividad concertística como intérprete de Oratorio y Lieder, especializándose en composiciones basadas en textos del romanticismo alemán, sobre todo Mahler, cuyas interpretaciones han cosechado siempre un enorme éxito de la crítica alemana.

Dedica muchos conciertos a la difusión de la música iberoamericana, en especial la gallega, admirada siempre y acogida con enorme interés por un público internacional. Precisamente con una ópera gallega, “O Arame”, del compositor Juan Durán, se ha presentado al público coruñés, que el pasado mes de febrero ha vuelto a escucharla en un concierto organizado por la Sociedad Filarmónica en el Teatro Rosalía Castro, acompañada al piano por el maestro Maximino Zumalave.

En marzo ha interpretado junto a la Orquesta de la Escuela de Altos Estudios Musicales, dirigida por Maximino Zumalave, los “Kindertotenlieder” de G. Mahler.

Grupo Instrumental Siglo XX

Florian Vlashi (director artístico)

El Grupo Instrumental Siglo XX (GISXX) nace en 1996 por iniciativa del violinista Florian Vlashi como homenaje al “Gran Siglo”. La finalidad del grupo es interpretar las mejores obras de música de cámara escritas desde comienzos del siglo XX hasta nuestros días.

Sus miembros son brillantes solistas de la Orquesta Sinfónica de Galicia. Provienen de más de 10 países diferentes y han recibido una formación especializada de excelencia en centros de gran prestigio internacional. Todos los solistas son expertos profesionales de altísimo nivel en su campo y poseen una dilatada experiencia en la práctica instrumental orquestal y como solistas. La composición del grupo es flexible y el número de los intérpretes varía dependiendo de las obras del programa que se interprete.

GISXX considera esencial la estrecha colaboración del grupo con el compositor. Los solistas del GISXX investigan sobre la creación de nuevas técnicas para su instrumento y colaboran activamente con los compositores con los cuales trabajan en la aplicación de estas técnicas a sus obras.

GISXX ha estrenado más de 84 obras y tiene en su extenso repertorio con más de 160 obras de autores desde Stravinski, Falla, R. Strauss, hasta Messiaen, Xenakis, Ligeti o Crumb.

Ha participado en diversos certámenes nacionales e internacionales como los festivales de música de A Coruña (Festival Mozart), Santiago, Salamanca, Bilbao (Festival de Música del Siglo XX), Madrid (CDMC), Bienal NMK de Durres (Albania), Verona (Italia), Remusica (Kosovo) etc. en los que ha obtenido las mejores críticas y fervorosos aplausos del público.
